Note: Mr. Stuart O. Landry in his admirable book entitled HISTORY OF THE BOSTON CLUB (New Orleans) very properly takes exception to the statements on page 11, lines 14-16: "That such old and important cities as Charleston and New Orleans should not be early with their clubs is due to the social customs of the people"; and, on lines 20-22 that: "In New Orleans, the French race had not developed the club."

Mr. Landry states that New Orleans developed club life almost as soon as did New York and Philadelphia; and that the Pelican Club (no longer in existence) was established in New Orleans in the early eighteen thirties.

MRS. RUBICAM'S COFFEE HOUSE
FIFTH AND MINOR STREETS in 1830

Foreword

Foreword

I.

THE Philadelphia Club is the oldest of its kind in the United States. Had it named itself after the manner of certain famous English Clubs, it would bear the name of the proprietor of the Coffee House where it originated, as do White's, Brooks's, and Boodle's in London; it would be Rubicam's.

White's was frequented by one set of political partisans, Brooks's by the other; country gentlemen and fox hunters consorted at Boodle's; a still different common interest drew together the early members of the Philadelphia Club, as shall be seen in the brief history of the Club, written some years ago by Mr. A. J. Dallas Dixon, and presently to be quoted.

Citizens of Athens and of Rome in the days of their classic prime, formed associations for political, religious, and commercial purposes; the object of the men who met at the Mermaid and the Devil's Tavern during the reign of Elizabeth was mainly convivial; during the centuries between Caesars and Tudors, it was guilds, knights, and monks who carried on the group instinct. The social club of to-day descends from none of these, and did not appear until after coffee appeared, and, in the face of some opposition, prevailed.

The properties of coffee are said to have been first appreciated by an oriental shepherd who pastured his goats in a region where grew the coffee bush. This observant rustic was struck by the vivacious deportment of his animals after they had browsed upon the berries. He tried some himself with like consequences. To this phenomenon he drew the attention of a neighboring hermit, who experimented personally, and whose alert intelligence at once saw a great future for coffee. Infusions were made, bags of the berry transported, Turkey adopted the new beverage. Presently bags of coffee, with other merchandise, were brought westward to Marseilles by Armenians, and made their way northward up the valley of the Rhone. Armenians carried coffee to Paris in the 17th century. There an enterprising native of Sicily, Procopi by name, elevated coffee from the humble booths where it was served, created a much more elaborate and ornamented establishment where various refreshments beside coffee were sold, moved opposite the Théâtre Français, and it was not long before some hundred rivals competed with him in Paris. Hence was evolved the French Café, and at about the same time the London Coffee House, from which grew White's in 1698, Boodle's in 1762, and Brooks's in 1764. So the Philadelphia Club, founded in 1834, is seventy years younger than Brooks's.

Second in seniority to the Philadelphia Club is the Union Club, New York, 1836, followed by the Century in 1847; the Somerset, Boston, 1851; the Pacific, San Francisco, 1852; and the Maryland, Baltimore, 1857. The rush of civilized adventurers to California in 1849—McAllisters, Wards, Colemans, Peytons—many college-bred men, with the presence of gentlemen stationed at the Presidio, accounts for the relatively early date of the Pacific Club. That such old and important cities as Charleston and New Orleans should not be early with their clubs is due to the social customs of the people. Owing to the climate, Charlestonians were likely to pass the greater part of the year on their plantations or in the mountains; while during their few months in town they entertained at home. In New Orleans, the French race had not developed the club, and after the Louisiana purchase was slow to accept Americans on account of the character of too many of the first Americans to arrive there after 1803. The Virginians lived almost entirely a country life, hence Richmond also was late in having a club.

The account of our origin and growth, written by Mr. A. J. Dallas Dixon some thirty years ago, was printed in previous issues of the Club Book, and is as follows:—

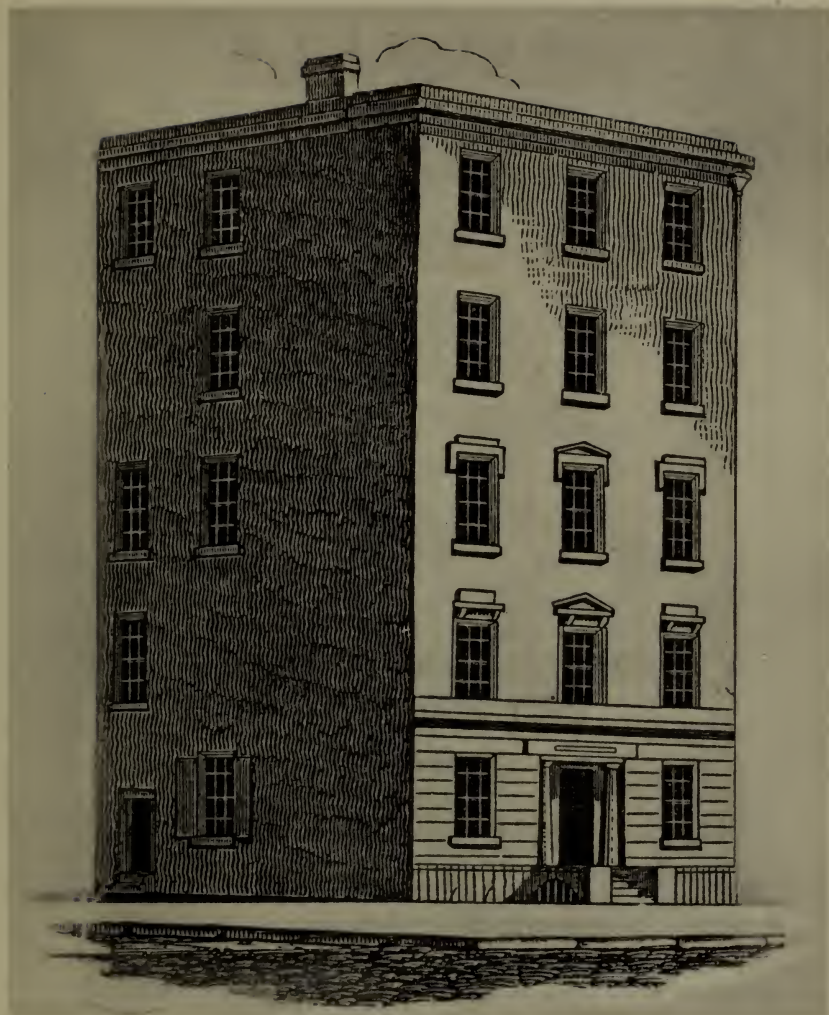

In the year 1830 a number of gentlemen were in the habit of meeting to play cards at Mrs. Rubicam's Coffee House, at the northwest corner of Fifth and Minor Streets. They were joined later by another party of gentlemen who met at Mrs. Arney's Coffee House, at Sixth and Minor Streets, and early in 1834 removed to the old "Adelphi Building," on the west side of Fifth Street, below Walnut (now No. 212 South Fifth Street). At this time they adopted the name of "The Adelphi Club," and on March 21st, 1834, held their first recorded meeting for the purpose of organizing and adopting a Constitution and By-Laws. At this meeting the following gentlemen, who may fairly be regarded as the "Founders of the Philadelphia Club," were present:—

HENRY BOHLEN,	THOMAS W. FRANCIS,
GEORGE CADWALADER,	P. L. LAGUERENNE,
HENRY CHANCELLOR,	JAMES MARKOE,
WILLIAM F. CLEMONSON,	HENRY PRATT MCKEAN,
GEORGE C. CRAIG,	JAMES MCMURTRIE,
GEORGE FOLLIN,	HENRY RALSTON,
THOMAS ROTCH.

At the next meeting, held March 28th, 1834, the first Board of Directors was chosen, namely:—

EDWARD S. BURD, Chairman.

HENRY BOHLEN,	GEORGE CADWALADER,
WILLIAM M. CAMAC,	GEORGE FOLLIN,
JAMES MARKOE,	HENRY RALSTON.

ADELPHI BUILDING
212 SOUTH FIFTH STREET
1834-1835

In April, 1835, the Club rented the old Bonaparte House (so called from having been at one time the residence of Joseph Bonaparte), at No. 260 (then No. 156) South Ninth Street. Shortly after moving into its new quarters, the name of the Club was changed to "The Philadelphia Club," by which name it continued to be known until its incorporation in 1850.

In March, 1843, the Club moved to the house in Walnut Street below Tenth, afterwards the residence of Mr. J. Francis Fisher, No. 919 Walnut Street.

In 1845 the "Union Club," which occupied a house at the southwest corner of Tenth and Walnut Streets, where the Western Saving Fund now stands, broke up, and most of its members joined The Philadelphia Club.

On May 8th, 1850, the Club was incorporated under the name of "The Philadelphia Association and Reading Room," and on July 15th, 1850, purchased the present Club House, No. 1301 Walnut Street, then known as the Butler House. This house had been the property of Thomas Butler, only son of Major Pierce Butler, the first of that name in this country, who came here from Ireland in 1765, and was afterwards Senator from South Carolina.

Thomas Butler began to build the present Club House, in the most expensive manner, as a residence for himself, but died in 1838, leaving it unfinished; in his will he directed his trustees, Col. William Drayton and the Hon. John Sergeant, to finish it according to his plans. It then became the property of his son, Louis Butler, who, however, never occupied it; the house was used for a time as a boarding house, and subsequently as a young ladies' boarding school.

The deed to the Philadelphia Association and Reading Room was dated November 18th, 1850, and on the same day the Club House was first opened to members. The first meeting of the Board of Directors in the new Club House was held on November 22d, 1850, and early in the following year the Club gave an opening ball.

Notwithstanding its corporate title, the Club was very generally called "The Philadelphia Club," even in the official minutes of meetings, and in accordance with a resolution adopted at a stated meeting of the Club, April 4th, 1859, the name and title of "The Philadelphia Association and Reading Room," was by a decree of the Court of Quarter Sessions for the City and County of Philadelphia, made the twenty-fifth day of May, 1859, changed to that of "The Philadelphia Club."

* * *

Since the foregoing was written by Mr. Dixon in 1903, a Club Book for the year 1834 has been discovered in the Historical Society. Article I. of the "Rules and Regulations" reads as follows:—

This Club shall be termed the "Philadelphia Club," and its object shall be the encouragement of social intercourse.

There were sixty-two members and the initiation fee was $40 and the annual dues $30. While the Club may have adopted the name "The Adelphi Club" in the beginning, it is now certain that it was called the "Philadelphia Club" in the first year of its existence.

It seems odd that this earliest name of the Club should ever have been dropped; but for some reason it was. On December 24, 1846, while we were still occupying the house at 919 Walnut Street,

“The Circle,” is mentioned—perhaps in imitation of the French Cercle. Evidently a change of name had been discussed at our meetings, which at that time were held every three months. On April 11, 1850, before we had acquired 1301 Walnut Street, a Resolution was offered to change the name from Philadelphia Club to Philadelphia Circle, or Philadelphia Literary and Social Institute, or Philadelphia Association and Reading Room; and the last of these preposterous titles was adopted. As has been seen in Mr. Dixon’s narrative, it survived until 1859. Is it possible that the term Club was objectionable to that sentiment in the town which compelled our first Theatre to be built in South Street, at that time outside the City Limits, and also caused our first and famous Opera House to be entitled the Academy of Music?

About a month before 1301 Walnut Street was opened for occupancy, the following resolution was passed, interesting for its use of the word “Association” as well as for its subject matter:—

October 15, 1850.

Whereas the Board of Directors have learned with surprise that certain members of the Association have induced the servants of the Association to accept employment in their private residences in place of those held in the Association, Therefore, Resolved, That such conduct is in the opinion of the Board a censurable and indecorous interference with the comfort of the members of the Association. Resolved, That notice of the above preamble and resolution be posted on the walls of the Association.

In our old title the term "Reading Room" recalls the fact that the first recorded resolution, passed October 11, 1834, was a subscription to Galignani's Messenger. From this it is to be inferred that the members of the Club in those days were apt to take what used to be called The Grand Tour, and therefore were interested in that now extinct Paris publication, printed for the special benefit of English-speaking travelers. Among other early subscriptions to periodicals are Blackwood's Magazine and the Court Journal of England. During the Century which has followed that first subscription, the volume of periodicals, both American and foreign, has greatly increased, and so have the Club's subscriptions to them: the number we take in to-day covers one table downstairs, half another in the room above this, and fills a rack against the wall in the east front room on the first floor. In recent years the chaste eyes of our Democracy shut themselves suddenly at the sight of a copy of a French weekly illustrated paper, La Vie Parisienne, and it was officially confiscated on its way to us.

About this time, June 28, 1838, a young attaché at the American Legation in London, Richard Vaux, future Mayor of Philadelphia, and President of the Club fifty years later, is reported to have danced with Queen Victoria at the Ball in honor of her coronation. When the news of this was communicated to his Quaker mother at home, she is said to have remarked after a pause:—"I hope that my son Richard will not marry out of Meeting."

There had been a wish to acquire our present house for some time before the year 1850. As early as February 10, 1848, Charles Harlan, James Markoe, and Henry Ralston were appointed a Committee to enquire into the expediency of purchasing or renting the premises at the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Walnut Streets. On February 15th, this Committee reported that the proprietor of the Butler House at Thirteenth and Walnut Streets would not rent, but would sell for thirty thousand dollars.

The Club during this year had one hundred and twenty-eight members. The following figures show:—

Receipts for 6 months, April to

October 1848.....	$4,534.67
Card Fees.....	$1,062.03
Expenses.....	$4,299.32

On January 28, 1850, the Committee was authorized to purchase 1301 Walnut Street for ten thousand dollars, subject to a ground rent of one thousand per year, redeemable upon the payment of the principal of twenty thousand dollars.

After three moves in sixteen of our early years, we have been stationary for eighty-five. Suggestions that we change again have been made and discussed more than once—it has gone further than suggestion. Clement B. Newbold and John W. Geary bought an option on the Wetherill property at the southeast corner of Broad and Walnut Streets. They offered this option to the Club, there being some thought of a removal at the time. The meeting voted against the removal. A member offered a resolution of thanks to the two gentlemen for their generosity in offering the option to the Club, but before a vote had been taken, Mr. Charles C. Norris (1858–1918) arose and said that on the contrary, he thought a resolution should be adopted censuring the two gentlemen for daring to suppose that the Club would move from the present building.

About 1926 there was a great real estate boom in Philadelphia and the tendency seemed to be a movement of the centre of the city westward. A large sum was offered for the Club property and a feeling of restlessness and a desire to move was apparent in the membership.

This feeling led to the appointment of a Committee to canvass the situation and propositions of all kinds were made, including the suggestion that the Club take the upper floor or floors of a central city skyscraper then building. The Committee was composed of Eli K. Price, Benjamin Chew and Isaac W. Roberts, and their labors were recorded in verse by Guilliaem Aertsen as follows:—

When a Club has to move,
It sure does behoove
It to choose the right sort of men;
But where in this City
Could be found a Committee
Like Eli and Isaac and Ben?

The Jews seem to feel
In a real estate deal
They can beat anyone on the pike;
But what Hebrews fear we
With our crack Christians three—Benjamin, Eli and Ike?

In 1927 the Club voted by a large majority to acquire a plot of ground on the Parkway at Eighteenth Street and to build thereon a clubhouse. The property was acquired and plans were drawn by William Adams Delano of New York for a very handsome building. Interests with much influence with the City Administration objected to the project and after litigation the idea had to be abandoned.

Any member of the Club who attended the crowded meeting called to discuss the wisdom of that change, is not likely to have forgotten the speech opposing it which was made by Daniel Holsman (1886-1929), familiarly known to everyone as "Danny." It does not exist in writing, or some of it would be recorded here. The mood of the majority was against him: the centre of the town had undoubtedly moved, would continue to do so; Thirteenth and Walnut Streets had ceased for many years to be a residential quarter, had become both commercial and shabby, and our property, for which we had paid thirty thousand dollars in 1850, would now fetch us a price in seven figures. Against these material facts, Holsman based his argument upon those two imponderables, sentiment and conservatism. He did so with his customary whimsical wit. He spoke of the large church that would stare into our windows, of the sound of its constantly ringing bells, which would disturb the sleep and distract the seldom ecclesiastical conversation of the members, and intrude itself upon them night and day. Nothing that he said could change the determination of the majority; it was the external forces which afterwards fought and won for him. Holsman's information was so extensive and his memory so exact, that when he died it was said that henceforth members would be driven to consult the encyclopedia instead of asking him about anything they wanted to know. He was a character. The Club used to be full of them, all somehow suggesting the people of the eighteenth century, and all haters of change.

Wherever situated, whether in the old Adelphi Building, or in the Bonaparte House, or at 919 Walnut Street, or where it has stood now for eighty-five years, the Club had always been within fifteen or twenty minutes walk from the town houses of those gentlemen who met to play cards at Mrs. Rubicam's Coffee House in 1830, and the houses of their successors—always, until the automobile appeared and took them out of town to their houses and their clubs in the country, leaving The Philadelphia Club a lonely place. Now, during the afternoon hours, when cards used to be played upstairs, billiards downstairs, and the rooms were filled with the members, dropping in on their way from their offices to their families, emptiness prevails. Cards and billiards in the Club are things of the past; only at lunch time do the games of sniff and backgammon flourish in the room where were formerly the billiard tables. Should George Cadwalader or James Markoe or any other of the founders return, looking for a game, their ghosts would have to play with each other on phantom tables.

Nothing could be more characteristic of our Typical Old Member than the conduct of Mr. William Read Fisher (1858-1913), when about thirty years ago some alterations were made, including a new coat-room at the left of the entrance. The former coat-room was made into a tea-room west of the post-office. Mr. Fisher strongly objected to a change of any kind, and, until the day of his death, when he entered the Club, he would walk straight ahead up the marble steps, never looking to the left, and deposit his coat and hat on a chair in the new tea-room where the coat-room formerly had been.

As the following record will show, alterations more extensive than the changes to which Mr. Fisher objected, were naturally necessary to fit the Butler House for the uses of the Club, when it was purchased from its proprietor, Mrs. Watson, in July 1850:—

June 17, 1850.

On motion of Mr. Thomas, resolved that the following be the basis of the alterations to be made in the premises at Thirteenth and Walnut Streets.

- 1st. The entrance to remain in Walnut Street without change.
- 2nd. The kitchen to be arranged in the back building.
- 3rd. Folding doors between the 1st. and 2nd. story rooms, and a single door between the 3rd. story rooms.
- 4th. The N.W. back room on the 1st. Floor to be fitted up as a servants' hall.
- 5th. The two first floor rooms to be arranged, the East room for the reading room, the West room for the Drawing room, the two second story front rooms for card rooms, the Northeast Back room, 1st. floor for table d'hote room with a door opening into the main hall, the back rooms in the second story, to be fitted up for dining rooms for parties, with doors on the hall, the four rooms in the third story to be fitted up for billiard rooms, the servants hall to have a door communicating with the main stairway as well as one with the hall. The wash house in the cellar under the kitchen—Wine-bins and closets in the cellar.

On motion adjourned,

J. B. BIDDLE,
Secretary.

Five months elapsed between the passing of this resolution and the day when our new quarters were ready for occupancy. Then the Typical Old Members took their seats at the front windows with their hats on, and, from this commanding position, surveyed Walnut Street.

Carpenters, joiners, and painters, with all other artisans who do their work upon houses, had done so much, that it is of interest to present in full the contemporary tale of what this work was, and what it cost:—

September 27, 1850.

Mr. Wilcocks submitted a report that the Committee on the hall and parlors have ordered for the hall an oilcloth at a cost of October 6, 1850.

The Board of Directors whose term of duties expires this day make to the Association the following statement of facts relating to the new building corner of Thirteenth and Walnut Streets:—

The Board came into possession of the premises on the 15th day of July, and after careful inspection of the building they, with the advice of an experienced architect, determined on and have carried out certain alterations and additions which will be detailed in order.

Main Floor: The front rooms on this floor designed for parlors, have been made to communicate by means of a large doorway, to be furnished with sliding doors.

The back rooms have been altered with a view to their use as dining-rooms, by the addition of three doors, and by placing in the northeast room a new mantlepiece.

The room in the back building has been divided by an east and west partition, which will furnish the steward with an office, and the housekeeper with a room for dining, etc.

The doors opening from the hall into the stairways have been removed and the roomy archways left in their places.

Second Floor: The large rooms in front are designed for card rooms, and have been provided with sliding doors of communication. The small room in front will be furnished in keeping with the other two, and will be used for any purpose which may be determined hereafter.

The back rooms it has been designed to use as dining-rooms for private parties. It has not been found necessary to make any alterations in them.

The rooms in the back building have been fitted up and provided with wash basins, baths, water-closets, etc.

Third Floor: The four large rooms are intended as billiard rooms. In the two at the north it has been found expedient to diminish by four inches the thickness of the walls, in order to obtain sufficient space for the games of billiards.

The garrets have received no alterations.

Basement: The northeast room has been arranged as a kitchen by the building of a chimney, the laying down of a floor, etc.

The northwest room has been arranged as a servants hall, and will be fitted up in a way to conduce to the convenience of its occupants.

The small cellar under the vestibule will be used as a provision room.

The southwest cellar as a wine room, and the other front cellar for fuel.

The basement of the back building has been floored, etc., and is designed as a washroom.

A new stairway has been added which leads from the steward's room to the basement.

The front cellars have been paved with bricks, as also the cellar hall.

At the west end of the cellar hall a furnace has been placed, which sends heat into the main hall, and into the hall of the second story.

A wooden box has been laid under the pavement in the cellar hall, which, by establishing a communication between the main hall and the furnace, is designed to promote a circulation of the air.

All the principal rooms in the house except the parlors have been supplied with ventilators.

With the view of saving trouble and expense hereafter, it has been determined to paint all the walls in the first and second stories.

The house has been provided with gas fixtures; and chandeliers have been purchased, which are in keeping with the other furniture.

After careful examination, the Board offers the following estimate as a near approximation to the cost of what has been detailed:—

[It has been thought desirable to print the above in full as a matter of historical record —O. W.]

From the above it is shown that a member of the Club, Mr. Joseph Swift, (1834-1882), helped the purchase of 1301 Walnut Street. In 1854 thanks were voted him for his "liberality and public spirit" in loaning six thousand dollars towards this end.

Through the early years of our existence, various resolutions make it clear how constant an occupation was the playing of cards, and how limited the quarters allowed to smokers. That no smoking was to be allowed at any time in the card rooms, is one of the early rules, made May 16, 1835; and on October 24, 1835, a resolution was passed giving the steward three dollars and the waiter one dollar to be taken out of the amount received for fines—imposed presumably for breaches of the above rule. Later, a resolution was passed to admit non-card playing persons as visitors, instead of as members, at a semi-annual charge of ten dollars.

The following resolution was passed December 22, 1846:—

On Motion Resolved that hereafter the back parlor be used as a smoking and conversation room and for the ordinary purposes of the members of the Club (except eating and card playing), and that the front parlor be reserved for the use of those members who do not smoke and that the doors between the two parlors be closed.

But cards must be for week-days; on the same date in December, 1845, it was unanimously resolved, that the rooms be opened on Sundays till ten o'clock in the evening for reading and conversation, and for no other purpose.

And in 1855, smoking in the “drawing-room” was forbidden.

In that same year the billiard room addition was made; in 1858 it was ruled that the loser must pay the charges for billiards; and on December 12, 1858, the following interesting resolution was passed:—

On Motion Resolved that the N. W. room in the 3d story be appropriated as a music room, provided the room be closed at twelve o'clock at night.

In 1859, as Mr. Dixon has recorded, we became The Philadelphia Club, and ceased to be The Philadelphia Association and Reading Room, a title only a trifle less adipose than The Philadelphia Literary and Social Institute: had these titles not been seriously considered, and the former adopted, one would be inclined to suspect that both had been suggested by wags. True it is that in 1847, after the Club had been in existence for thirteen years, the members were asked to contribute books toward the formation of a library: but at that same period Mr. George Chapman (1845-1853) used to perform the uncommon feat of drinking a glass of madeira while standing on his head.

On April 13, 1847, it was resolved, that as a general illumination of the city will take place on the evening of the 19th instant in commemoration of the glorious victories obtained by our Army and Navy during the existing war with Mexico, that the Club House front be properly illuminated; that Messrs. Harris, Keith, Ralston and Henry be authorized so to do, and the Treasurer is hereby requested to pay the expense out of the Club fund.

Various small details of record during the years immediately preceding, and those following, our move from 919 to 1301 Walnut Street, may serve as comparisons with the present. We had a special Committee of two members on Wine, and the House Committee was of two (1848); the Elective Committee consisted of fourteen members, reduced to seven in 1864. For a New Year's Eve Entertainment in 1851, a hundred dollars were appropriated, of which eighty-eight were spent.

HEMPHILL HOUSE (LATER FISHER HOUSE)

919 WALNUT STREET

1843-1850

On January 16th of that same year the Club gave a Ball to celebrate the occupancy of its new building. An invitation card to this entertainment hangs in the small writing room. It lists the Committee of Arrangement as follows:—

T. Cadwalader, J. P. Hutchinson, Joseph Swift, Hartman Kuhn, Jr., James Markoe, Wm. T. Lowber, Saml. B. Thomas, Jno. T. Montgomery, Alex. Wilcocks, Bernard Henry, Jr.

The official preliminaries were as follows:—

A communication was read from Mr. Wm. T. Lowber, Secretary of a Committee of Arrangement, as follows:

Gentlemen:

I am directed by the Committee of Arrangement for the entertainment to be given by the members of the Philadelphia Club, to request the use of the Club House on the day and evening that the Committee may designate, for that purpose.

Your obedient servant,

W. T. LOWBER,

Secretary of the Committee.

To the President and Directors, of the Philadelphia Club.

The Secretary was instructed to reply to the above communication (which he did) as follows:

Philadelphia Association & Read Room

9th Dec 1850.

Sir:

I am desired by the Directors to inform you, that inasmuch as a large majority of the Club by subscribing to the proposed entertainment, have signified their wish that the house should be used for that purpose, the Board acquiesce in the request contained in your note of 3rd December.

Your obedient servant,

ALEX WILCOCKS,

Sec. pro tempore.

Mr. Wilcocks on behalf of the Committee upon the proposed Ball asked permission of the Board to make certain arrangements in the rooms on the day preceding that on which the Ball is to be given provided they interfere with the convenience of the members of the Club as little as possible, which permission was on motion granted.

And in April, after the event:—

On Motion Resolved That the deficit on the subscription list to the Ball amounting to $40 be paid by the Treasurer of the Club out of the Club funds.

It is interesting to note that in none of the communications or resolutions is any date mentioned for the entertainment. The date was ascertained from the invitation card pictured at page 66.

Three other resolutions were passed at this period:—

On Motion Resolved That Dr. Wilcocks & Mr. Ralston be a Committee to attend to the planting of trees and enclosing the same in iron tree boxes on the Walnut & Thirteenth Street fronts.

On Motion Resolved That the paint be scraped from the front door and that it be allowed to remain in the original mahogany.

On Motion Resolved That Messrs. Markoe and Swift be a Committee to superintend the erection and construction of a suitable piazza in the rear of the Club House.

II.

During the years between the founding of the Club and the giving of the Ball in January 1851, first of the three entertainments to which the Club has invited the families of its members, the list of guests from other countries and from other parts of this country had been growing. The Visitors' Book of any long-established club evokes a pageant of associations. The names of themselves suggest the events historical, political, and social with which they are connected, all the way from Army and Navy football, important dances, weddings and conventions, to war. On April 23, 1834, Edward Everett was a guest; twenty-nine years later, he delivered the oration at Gettysburg which the words spoken by Lincoln cast into oblivion. John Slidell was a visitor on September 2nd of the same year; Henry Clay on November 25th; James Mason later. These four names alone evoke North and South, slavery and anti-slavery, the Trent affair, the Civil War.

Our first century of visitors ends March 30, 1934. The name of B. M. Carter heads the list March 30, 1834. He is from Virginia, and B. probably stands for Bernard; to-day there is a Bernard Carter, of Virginian descent. During the thirty days that follow, sixty guests are recorded; the Spanish Minister with a civil and a naval attaché; the Consul General of the Two Sicilies; gentlemen from Russia, Germany, and France; and beside Carter and Randolph from Virginia, visitors with names equally linked with the social order of their native States; Bayard, Stockton, Cadwalader, Wadsworth, Rhineland, Van Rensselaer, Lyman, Perkins. The most eminent Pennsylvanian was Chief Justice Gibson, who, when in good company, would sit up late with whisky, get up early to deliver decisions, telling the boy who waked him, to bring him "Coffee, hot as hell and strong as the wrath of God."

Philadelphia happens to lie virtually on the border between two colonial parts of the country, distinct from each other; south of the Schuylkill the South may fairly be said to begin, and north of the Delaware, the North. The city is on the direct path between them. What is known now to automobilists as National Route No. 1, is pretty much the road which Washington traveled from Mount Vernon up, and Adams traveled from Boston down, in days when Philadelphia was more important than New York. If to this be added the fact that foreign ministers and diplomats, with other visitors from Europe, commonly landed in New York on their way to Washington, Philadelphia was a point where they would be almost certain to break their journey. Those two hundred and thirty miles were then a matter of a week. It was not until 1839 that the time between Jersey City and Camden, a distance of about ninety miles, was "shortened" to seven hours. At Jersey City the traveler left the ferry from New York for the train to Camden, where he took the ferry for the Walnut Street wharf in Philadelphia. Before March 21, 1834, there was no club where a friend could entertain him. After that date, there was this Club, bearing its present or a former name.

In 1834, the first year of the Club's existence, Philadelphia contained some 82,000 inhabitants, the population of the United States was about thirteen million, the number of States was twenty-four and Andrew Jackson, seventh president, was in his second term. His name does not appear among the presidents who have been entertained at the Club. His successor, Van Buren, was more than once a guest. Eleven out of the hundred years are missing from the Club's record of visitors. The first gap is between November 1839 and January 1846; the second, from January 1, 1861, to February 1, 1866.

There is still a chance that the missing volumes may be found, deposited in some forgotten place of safekeeping. A change of the Club's residence occurred during the first interval, not during the second, which covers most of the Civil War and of Lincoln's administration and must be of special interest. Taking the 89 recorded years, the average number of visitors a year is 475, and 40 for each month. These averages would be somewhat lower but for the year 1876, when the names of 1602 visitors, brought chiefly by the Centennial Exhibition, are registered. As in other years, they come from all parts of the world. During the 50's the stream of visitors from North and South increases somewhat, retaining, however, its general character; guests diplomatic, Army and Navy guests, and guests from North and South with names well known in their days: Coupers, Troupes, Andersons, Kings, from Savannah; Middletons, Heywards, Hugers, Manigaults, Izards, Alstons, Pringles, Ravenels, Prioleaus, Rutledges and Pinckneys from South Carolina; Pages, Masons, Randolphs, Carters, and more, from Virginia; Carrolls from Maryland, Bayards from Delaware, all the representative New York, Newport, New Bedford and Boston names—in short, the leading social names from wherever there were any. Many of them recur frequently: James Wadsworth, for example, from Geneseo; there are three generations of Wadsworths. Alexander Duncan, with several other guests from Natchez, is periodically a visitor. The preponderance of Southerners from Charleston is striking, and recalls the fact that in that part of the 19th century many went to Newport, and many to Harvard College. All in all, the unofficial names in the book reveal that guests from every established society in the country came here, many of them repeatedly. As the years approach the present day, old names grow rare, new ones plentiful. Certain inferences, social and political, may be drawn from a comparison between a succession of years, though it may not be easy to account for all the variations.

In the Visitors' Book, September 17, 1849, the name of Bernard E. Bee is entered. He came from South Carolina, his father was a judge there, and his son fought for the Confederacy, being killed at Bull Run. His odd career may explain why U. S. A. is written after his name. Early in the 1820's, he was associated with some of the "schemes of internal improvement" in South Carolina. These were forerunners of the present system of financial control from Washington. He drifted to Texas next, with many like him. There, with many like him, he was interested in strange land transactions; and in 1836 had a hand in forming the Republic of Texas. In 1839, President Austin appointed him Texan Ambassador to Mexico. On landing at Vera Cruz, he was stopped and presently expelled by force. This gesture on the part of Mexico may be laid to Bee's going to Washington, before he started on his mission, to ask advice from Van Buren and Poinsett, our Secretary of War. Bee knew no language except English, and nothing of the affairs of the country to which he was accredited. Of this diplomatic equipment he seems to have boasted. Ignorance has not wholly ceased to be a qualification of our diplomatic representatives.

It is clear that the Civil War in 1861 reduced the number of visitors from the South, and increased the list of Army and Navy officers. Could the missing volumes between 1861 and 1866 be found, the case would undoubtedly be the same. During the period between the firing on Fort Sumter and the surrender at Appomattox, political opinion was divided among the members of the Club, and feeling ran very high. One of the front rooms in the Club was frequented by Union men and the other by Southern sympathizers. There was little communication between them. One Union man expressed his antagonism to "Copperheads" so offensively one day upon entering the Club ("this place reeks with them" was his observation) that one of the "Copperheads" knocked him down and was therefore expelled. He brought suit. The court sustained him, ordering that he be reinstated. He was again expelled, and again his suit was sustained. It may be that the judge's view of the legal aspect of a member's rights was colored by his political leanings. The gentleman shortly afterwards entered the Club, ordered a drink and handed in his resignation.

After the Civil War, the proportion and character of foreign visitors was modified by another and more permanent cause. It has been said that in 1839 the time of the journey between Jersey City and Camden was shortened to seven hours. At the time the Club was founded, 1834, travelers between New York, Washington and the South took boat to South Amboy and train from there through Bordentown to Camden. The next year, they could arrive via Trenton at the Kensington Depot. Not until 1838 could they continue by rail southward to Wilmington from the station at Eleventh and Market Streets (removed to Broad and Prime Streets in 1852), and even then horses still drew the cars as far as Gray's Ferry, where a locomotive met them. Almost of necessity, therefore, all travelers were ready to pass at least a night in Philadelphia before starting upon the next stage of their journey. If they did not stay at the houses of friends, they put up at various hotels long vanished, the Mansion House, Jones Hotel, Columbia House, Head's Hotel. Not for a number of years does the Girard House appear, followed by the Continental, the La Pierre, the Lafayette, the St. George, in days long before the Bellevue, the Stratford, and the Ritz.

In 1867 came the permanent change in conditions which materially diminished the number of foreign envoys, ministers, attachés, and other diplomatic visitors. The Pennsylvania Railroad built its connecting road from Frankford to Mantua Junction, whence trains continued to Gray's Ferry over the "Junction Railroad," and so to Wilmington, Baltimore, and Washington. Instead of driving across Philadelphia, travelers could go round it without any change; and since stopping had ceased to be compulsory, fewer of the diplomatists did stop.

To give a full list of visitors of note in their day from Edward Everett, April 23, 1834, to Shane Leslie, January 15, 1934, would be cumbersome. A selection follows. The names are given as they appear in the Visitors' Book of the Club.

Public Men. Edward Everett, Henry Clay, James Mason, Beverly Tucker, Edouard de Lafayette, M. Van Buren, Henry A. Wise, James K. Polk, Francis P. Blair, Hon. John Slidell, Charles Francis Adams, Wade Hampton, James L. Petigru, Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, Hon. James Buchanan, Franklin Pierce, Richard Cobden, Lord Lyons, Hon. Charles Sumner, Mr. Chief Justice Gray (Mass.), Marquis de Rochambeau, Marquis de Talleyrand-Perigord, Charles Stewart Parnell, Lord Randolph Churchill, Earl of Dunraven, General Boulanger, J. Wolfe Tone, H. Cabot Lodge, Sir Lionel West, Theodore Roosevelt, Comte de Paris, Duc d'Orleans, Gov. John Lee Carroll, Count Arco-Valle, Hon. Wm. H. Taft, Nicholas Longworth, Grand Duke Alexander, H.R.H. the Duke of Abruzzi, Duke of Manchester, Winston Churchill, Mr. Chief Justice Holmes (Mass.), W. McKinley, Lord Fisher, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Elihu Root, I. R. Masaryk, Lord Louis Mountbatten, Sir Ronald Lindsay.

Soldiers and Sailors. Commodores Stewart and Chauncey (War of 1812), Lt. George B. McClellan, Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, Lt. M. C. Meigs, General Burnside, Maj. Gen. W. T. Sherman, Lt. Jerome Bonaparte, Lt. Peary, Maj. Gen. Phil Sheridan, General J. W. Forsythe, Col. G. A. Forsythe, Col. W. T. Cody (Buffalo Bill), Maj. Gen. George Gordon Meade, General Horace Porter, Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock, Admiral David A. Porter, Admiral W. S. Schley, General U. S. Grant, General Fitzhugh Lee, General Kirby Smith, General J. Kilby Smith, Admiral W. S. Sims, Commodore George Dewey, General Nelson A. Miles, General Leonard Wood, Commodore Mahan, Admiral Sampson, General Geo. Goethals, Captain Sigsbee.

Men of Letters and of Science. Captain Marryat, Samuel Lover (author of Handy Andy), H. W. Longfellow, Martin F. Tupper, Professor Louis Agassiz, W. M. Thackeray, Bayard Taylor, J. Buchanan Read, Hepworth Dixon, Donald G. Mitchell, Goldwin Smith, George Bancroft, Herbert Spencer, Professor Lanciani, Thomas Motley, Paul du Chaillu (explorer), Professor Alexander Agassiz, Thomas Nelson Page, Booth Tarkington, Bram

Stoker, Dr. Wm. J. Mayo, Henry Fairfield Osborn, George Trevelyan.

Painters, Actors, Singers, Musicians. Henry Inman, Charles Kemble, L. M. Gottschalk, James Wallack, James Wallack, Jr., Signor Brignoli, W. H. Prescott, Dion Boucicault, Wm. J. Florence, E. H. Sothern, Lawrence Barrett, John Drew, George T. Thorn, Lester Wallack, Joseph Jefferson, Henry Irving, Forbes-Robertson, Max Alvary, Beerbohm Tree, George Grossmith, Jr., Francis Wilson, David Bispham, William Faversham, James K. Hackett, Henry E. Dixey, Nat Goodwin, Reginald de Koven, Edwin Booth, John S. Sargent, A. B. Frost, John Barrymore, Alexander Harrison, I. Paderewski, Sir Charles Wyndham, Joseph Pen-nell, Leopold Stokowski, Josef Hofmann, George Arliss.

Many of these visitors, political and others, were guests upon several occasions. One President, Rutherford B. Hayes, came to Philadelphia not infrequently, but went to the Union League club. Thither a member of that club, as well as of the Philadelphia Club, usually escorted him. Once within the doors, Hayes would throw his arms round the neck of his escort and exclaim:—"For God's sake, Patterson, give me a drink!"

This President's wife was a devout prohibitionist. William M. Evarts, on being asked how much of a success their first diplomatic reception was, replied:—"Altogether brilliant. Water flowed like champagne."

Although the Prince of Wales was our guest in 1860, traveling as Baron Renfrew, this name does not appear on the list; but it is related that the titled gentleman in charge of him sat up one night waiting his return to their suite in the Continental Hotel hour after hour, until his anxiety at two in the morning led him to make searching inquiries. He was but partially reassured upon learning that His Royal Highness was still at the Club, greatly enjoying himself.

At a later day, another guest of less distinction was seen by a policeman to be assisted out of the Club to his carriage by two members, who closed the carriage door for him. But almost immediately the door opened, a pair of boots was deposited on the carriage step, and the door again closed, while the coachman carefully conveyed the gentleman to the house where he was stopping.

In turning back and forth the pages of the Club's record of visitors between 1834 and 1934, the long succession of names and dates affords many temptations to comment: as, for example, the first appearance of any visitor from Texas in 1847; as the name of that quasi-Texan, Bernard E. Bee, who, after his highly abbreviated career as Texan Minister to Mexico, became Texan Minister to the United States (1840-1841); or as Isaac G. Strain, U.S.N., registered June 1, 1850, two weeks after Professor Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Strain was a Pennsylvanian, and already distinguished by the time he was twenty-nine, when he was a guest of the Club. At twenty-four he had led an exploring expedition into the interior of Brazil; was later in lower California; and in 1849 he made the overland journey from Valparaiso to Rio de Janeiro, when he rejoined his ship. In 1850 he was attached to the commission that set the boundary line between the United States and Mexico. But his survey of the Isthmus of Darien in 1854 was his outstanding achievement. The exposures and hardships suffered by the party of which he was in command, and the heroism which he displayed, brought him fame, undermined his health, and eventually cost him his life at thirty-six. With a view to laying a cable between our Country and England, he was able, the year before he died, to make soundings in the North Atlantic. To this day, the surveys which he made on the Isthmus remain authoritative. Beside the significance which lies behind such individual names, scattered among many pages, a single page of Englishmen, Australians, or Canadians, all on the same day, signifies that a visiting cricket team was here to play a match with our local eleven. Sometimes this would be at the Young America Cricket ground, once visible from the trains passing Wayne Junction; and sometimes at the grounds of the Germantown Cricket Club at Nicetown. On these occasions, now long obsolete, the match was a social event of importance, and the grand stand would be crowded and bright with charming women in charming dresses, looking on while our eleven, composed largely of members of the Newhall family, went in to bat, or out to long leg, and slip, and cover-point. Again, another page filled with the names of Army and Navy officers indicates a football game on Franklin Field; while another page of visitors from New York and Baltimore in December or January, marks the date of the first or second Assembly.

An instance of the Quaker turn of mind and speech has been seen in Mrs. Vaux's remark upon hearing that her son had danced with the young Queen of England. Another phase of this expresses itself in the following excellently laconic conversation:—

“Mr. T——, does thee want to buy some shares of the Philadelphia and West Chester Turnpike Company?”

“Not if thee wants to sell them, Mr. S——.”

Deprived of the flavoring quality of the Quaker turn of mind, Philadelphia could scarce have known itself in other days. The “plain language” lent emphasis to this, just as the famous stammer of William Travers set off the pith of his wit. A further example: one elderly member of a family said to another:—“Cousin Edward, I like a fool; but thee pleases me too well.”

A remark made to Mr. George Henry Boker (1847–1890) perfectly illustrates another special element in the spirit of old Philadelphia. Mr. Boker was a distinguished Philadelphian. When he was only twenty-six, and had been for two years a member of the Club, his play “Calaynos” was well received in London. At a later time, when our relations with Great Britain were under a grave strain, he wrote the following polished and noble sonnet:—

What though the cities blaze, the ports be sealed,
The fields untilled, the hands of labor still,
Ay, every arm of commerce and of skill
Palsied and broken; shall we therefore yield—
Break up the sword, put by the dintless shield?
Have we no home upon the wooded hill,
That mocks a siege? No patriot ranks to drill?
No nobler labor in the battle-field?
Or grant us beaten. While we gather might,
Is there no comfort in the solemn wood?
No cataracts whose angry roar shall smite
Our hearts with courage? No eternal brood
Of thoughts begotten by the eagle's flight?
No God to strengthen us in solitude?

Now in the days before Mr. Boker had won renown as a poet, and as the author of "Francesca da Rimini," and had as yet not "rushed into print," he showed his verses in manuscript to a friend. The friend heartily admired them:—

"But," he added, "of course you won't publish them."

"Why not?"

"Think how it would damage your social prestige."

During the seventies, Mr. Boker represented our country at St. Petersburg, and from there wrote his son, Secretary of the Club, 1875-79, in the following beautiful language:—

Legation of the United States
St. Petersburg, Oct. 8th, 1875

Geo Boker, Esq. Secretary of the Philada. Club &c &c &c.

Dear Sir, I have the honor to acknowledge the reception of your note of Sept. 20th, thanking me, on behalf of the Board of Directors of the Club for the Turkish Carpet which it gave me pleasure to present to an institution that stands foremost in my affection and happy remembrance. I accept with deep gratitude the kindly sentiments so courteously expressed by you in the name of the Board and beg to assure the gentlemen composing it, and my fellow members generally, that nothing will give me greater pleasure than to renew my former personal relations with them. I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

GEO. H. BOKER.

After his return from Russia, he was President of the Club, 1878-83.

On January 28, 1869, the Club gave another Ball. The invitation card lists the Committee of Arrangement as follows:—

Jos. C. Harris, James Markoe, Wm. Read Fisher, Edward Emlen Conner, Richard L. Willing, James Bayard, Jr., Genl. Geo. Cadwalader, A. E. Borie, George Tucker Bispham, Henry B. Coxe, Howell W. Bickley, Thomas McKean.

This was the second occasion when the Club opened its doors to ladies. It was prophesied that never again would ladies be invited on account of the feelings stirred up among those who were left out. It is said that one young lady who was not asked to the Ball, dressed herself as a scrub woman, and in that disguise looked on from behind the scenes. Another girl, invited, but forbidden to go by her austere and Quaker-minded father, escaped from his observation and went. Upon her return at an hour when he was safely asleep, she mounted a chair to light the gas in the hall, and the chair unfortunately fell over. The noise aroused and brought downstairs her parent, who administered appropriate discipline. One of the ladies who was present as a young girl, remembers the partners with whom she danced, and, at the age of eighty-five, has entered the Club to pour out tea on the third occasion in its history when ladies have been our guests; this time to a reception in celebration of the Club's hundredth anniversary.

At one time and another, various clubs within the Club have flourished for a while: The Decanter Club, for example, no longer active; and the Pee Wees.

The Pee Wee Club met on Saturday nights to dine. Its menus are preserved, and remind one by the hour set, by the food, and the wine, how different these matters were in the early seventies. The hour is six-thirty. Before sitting down, Sherry and bitters; no cocktails; the cocktail was not to break into decent society and blunt the palate for all delicacy in cooking or subtlety in wine, until some fifty years later. Oysters, Barsac; Soup; Smelts, Sauce Hollandaise, Sherry; Wild Turkey, [stuffed with chestnuts], Cranberry Sauce, Vegetables, Champagne; Canvas Back Duck, Chamber-tin; Lettuce; Roquefort, Gruyere, and de Brie cheese; Coffee; Cordials.

Beside menus, notes of acceptance and regret, receipted bills for Pee Wee stationery and engraved plate are also preserved in a large, extremely handsome "cigar box," with the Pee Wee coat-of-arms and motto carved on the lid; the cost of which was forty-five dollars. The motto, oddly enough, is the same as that of the Porcellian Club of Harvard, founded in 1791: Dum vivimus vivamus. There is also a stationer's bill, May 1879, for "1 Record Book," ten dollars. This book is beautifully bound, and is locked by a clasp and key. On unlocking it, some two hundred pages of handsome paper are discovered, upon which not a single syllable has ever been written. Larger than life, the patron bird of the Pee Wees in silver used to stand on the table in company with the wild turkeys and canvas back ducks. They had other silver as well as wine glasses. These latter have unaccountably disappeared. The organization lasted for several years into the present century; were it now to revive, wild turkeys would no longer be likely to be found among the delicacies of its fare.

At the Assembly one year, a new champagne called Chateau D'Ay was used. Kehrer, the steward, wanted it introduced into the Club. At the proper time, at one of the dinners of the Pee Wee Club, he went to Mr. John T. Montgomery, who was at the head of the table, and said: "Shall I serve the D'Ay?" The answer was: "Never say D'Ay! Mumms the word!"

For their historic and gastric interest, three menus are here set forth in detail, transcribed from the record of private dinners given during the stewardship of William Kehrer, and selected to illustrate the resources of our market in other days. Apparent throughout the one hundred and forty-nine repasts recorded in William Kehrer's ledger, are the earlier hours for dining in fashion during the 70's, the enviable difference in the cost of meat and drink, and the capacity of those who consumed them. The total absence of the cocktail and almost total absence of the cigarette are also to be observed.

It is clear that gentlemen who dined so well did not expect to rise early. Terrapin, canvas back, reed birds, magnums, and breakage—these afford a glimpse (if but partial) of our inner life, which prepares one but slightly for the impression conveyed to the world by our exterior. Said one of two that were passing our door:—

“Do you know that that is The Philadelphia Club?”

“Why no!” exclaimed the other in surprise, “I thought it was the Old Men’s Home.”

During the horse-car era, when cobblestones paved Walnut Street and grass sprouted between them, a member of the Club standing with the conductor on the back platform of a car asked him as it crossed Thirteenth Street if he knew what building they were passing:—"Yes," said the conductor, "I know. It's The Philadelphia Club, and I wish they would keep their pictures straight in the front room."

The Fish House and The Rabbit can not be called clubs within the Club, since they meet beneath their own roof-trees out of town. But most of their members belong also to The Philadelphia Club. It is almost too well-known to need repeating here, that the Fish House and General Washington came into being in the same year, 1732; that the latter was a guest of the former when both were more mature, and that the former is the oldest club in the world with a continuous existence. The Rabbit was founded in 1866, incorporated 1877. Three recent Presidents of the Club, Andrew Gray, Sidney W. Keith, B. Dawson Coleman, have been Presidents of The Rabbit.

Compared with English, American Letters are noticeably wanting in the personal anecdote, the human touch; and therefore they are less interesting and too often somewhat stilted, like people trying to be genteel. The unrecorded annals of any club that has seen several generations, would furnish the chronicler of an epoch with historic color and other elements of value.

During a game of billiards one evening many years ago, a member renowned for his strength approached the table after having dined, and lifted one end of it, thereby gravely affecting the position of the balls. For this he was called to account by the Committee who accepted his flat denial. Somewhat later he wrote the Committee that he had consulted the players and learned from them that the report of his conduct was accurate. He was disciplined.

By a rule made in the heyday of cards and billiards, games were to stop at midnight on Saturdays. A few minutes before that hour, Old William, the card man, would proceed through the Club, ringing a large bell. If a rubber was in progress, its progress must cease. The bell annoyed John Tucker, a member of the Board. He had it stopped. Without its warning, rubbers not seldom continued comfortably until one and two o'clock A.M. on Sunday.

A member of the Club was accustomed, while waiting for his dinner, to go to sleep in the library, a room where no one except the waiter was likely to disturb him. One day the waiter came to announce that the meal was ready, but could not, by merely speaking, arouse the member. To touch him, of course, was out of the question. At this moment a cat strolled in. The waiter picked the cat up, and tossing it in the sleeper's lap, promptly retired behind the doors. When he perceived that his manœuvre had succeeded, he reappeared, and said that dinner was served.

During the course of one of the private dinners in the Club, Mr. John T. Montgomery (1870-1892) remarked that he had a brother who was thirteen feet high. His table companions doubted this. Mr. Montgomery supported his statement by a bet. The bet was taken.

"I suppose it is generally admitted that two halves make a whole?" he inquired.

This was admitted, incautiously.

"Well," said Mr. Montgomery, "I have two half-brothers, each six-foot-six-and-a-half."

It was a fact, and he won the bet.

This same gentleman, having fallen into poor health, was ordered by his doctor to take a tablespoonful of whiskey with his meals.

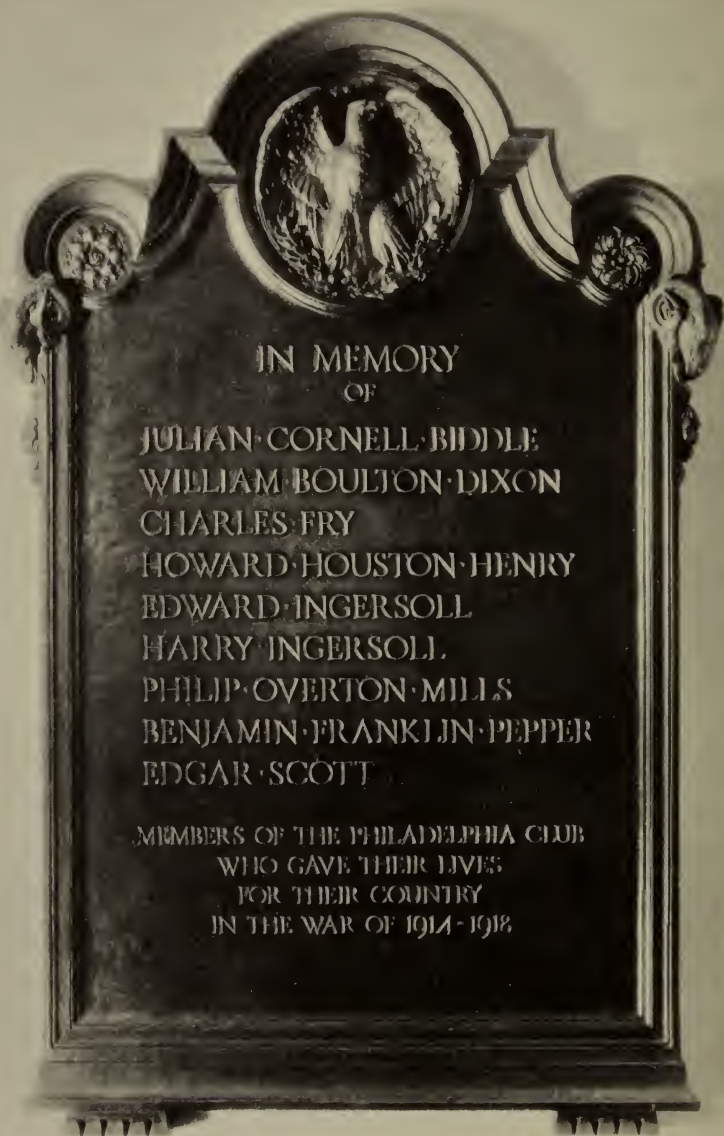

"I assume," said he, "that you mean this to be in addition to the quart I am in the habit of taking daily?"

It was the custom after an Assembly to repair to the Club. A member arriving one night after the Ball was surprised to see the dark appearance of the house; and on inquiring of the door-man if no one was in the Club, was answered, "Only about one hundred and fifty gentlemen, sir."

But no further temptations must be yielded to; enough has been said to show that our first century has not been without interest.

As has been already suggested, the automobile, interest in out-door sports, the removal of residence to the suburbs and country of practically all the members of the Club, the blight of prohibition — for its blight in forms transmuted survives repeal — and various other factors, have changed the life of the Club—not only this Club, but city clubdom in general.

About 1910, more young men were admitted, and it seems to me, from the perspective of to-day, that the Club became more youthful in its membership. Is the Typical Old Member—like cricket, like the stair-case in the foyer at the Assembly—to become a legend? Is none of the Past to make part of the Present any more? Never today will one Typical Old Member, seated opposite another by a front window at noon, be heard to say:—

MEMORIAL TABLET

“They should be planked on the left side.”

And the other to reply: “I am not sure of that.”

And four hours later, he who overheard this, return to find them in their chairs, and to hear the first one observe:—

“Notwithstanding, I repeat that they should be planked on the left side.”

Is all this ended?

Then came the Great War. Naturally the entire membership offered their services in any capacity in which they could serve their country, and while not all were of the age and condition to bear arms, all did their part in some measure.

The following gentlemen gave their lives in the service of the United States:

It was in May, 1925, that the notion of changing our residence was formulated, and in the following November not approved by the Board. At this time also the state of the Club's finances was reported and an increase of dues recommended. In December the dues of resident members were increased to two hundred dollars and those of other members correspondingly raised. At this December meeting also it was moved and carried that the President appoint a Committee of three "to consider the sale of the present Clubhouse at a proper figure and the purchase of a new site with power to obtain sketches and estimates for a new Clubhouse, and to make due report thereof to the Club."

What followed at the meeting on January 12, 1927, has been already told. Daniel Holsman was almost alone in his opposition to a change of residence. To-day, the opinion is probably unanimous that the political influence of a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church saved us from an irreparable mistake, and that thanks to him we still occupy that house which we have called home for eighty-five years.

To mark the hundredth anniversary of our founding, on Friday afternoon, April 6, 1934, the Club invited the ladies of the immediate families of its members to a reception from four to six. A Ball had been suggested, but a simpler entertainment was decided upon. Certain few objectors to the plan of opening our doors to ladies, were satisfied upon being reminded that to do this once in sixty-five years hardly constituted a grave menace. Certain doubts as to its success were relieved by the outcome: many wishes have been since expressed that it become an annual ceremony. A dinner at eight, exclusively for members, was arranged to follow the reception and complete the festival. Six hundred and three persons came to the reception, and to the dinner one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and fifty-one having subscribed to it.

It is unlikely that any social event within living recollection has raised more anticipation, and none seems to have left warmer enthusiasm behind it. The table was laid in the back room downstairs, with enough of the Club silver to give it the look of both festivity and dignity. Certain ladies had been invited to sit at each end, and pour out tea and coffee. There were the widows of three former Presidents, Mrs. John Markoe, Mrs. Sidney Keith and Mrs. S. Pemberton Hutchinson, and the daughter of another, Miss Mary Coles. They were relieved by other ladies during the afternoon. It is memorable that one who came to our Ball as a young girl in 1869, came in 1934 to pour out tea—Mrs. John Markoe.

The aspect of our stately old house, mellowed by many associations, now thronged with guests whose parents and grandparents had frequented it in their day, greeting each other with a certain unified sentiment and gaiety, is something to have seen, and never to forget. It seems hardly too fanciful to say that the ancient spirit of the town, enshrined beneath our roof, surviving in spite of external change, cast its charm upon that company.

At the dinner the dining-room could not seat everyone, and two or three tables in other rooms on the floor were filled. A correct instinct had prompted nearly universal full dress. Short speeches were made by the President, Mr. John Geary, and Mr. Edward Hopkinson. A relevant anecdote was narrated by Mr. Morris Parrish. Mr. Geary had come early to the reception, and now, from his wheeled chair, addressed the Club in words as welcome as was his gallant presence.

The success of both reception and dinner was materially increased by the zeal and efficiency of the steward and all those who assisted him, and of this we desire to record our appreciation.

It is historically certain that in 1869 the cocktail was an outsider. That it has become an insider, marks a change in taste, and a rise in temperature. It is likewise of historic interest that the restored presence, legally, of Bordeaux, Burgundy, and Champagne at our dinner table, marks a spark of improvement in national sanity, and raises a hope that the spark may some day quicken to a steady flame. Some day. Hardly to-morrow. We shall first need to resent and survive the injuries dealt us by a rapacious, irresponsible, and spendthrift bureaucracy. No one has as yet made clear what are the forces—social, educational, political, racial, religious, or climatic—which contribute to the excess of cranks we breed. Perhaps it is not that our quota of cranks is greater than elsewhere, but that here the voice of the crank is so loud and that it so often prevails.

At present we have but few Typical Old Members, which is to be regretted. We have always had some. Our latest were gentlemen of full years and have gone to their great reward or have retired. We miss them and have none to take their place. The present membership is on the whole youthful, and as maturity seems to be one of the essentials for a Typical Old Member, we can afford to wait, trusting that time will supply us with this almost necessary flavor in our Club.

What, in general, constitutes the modern club man, the member of the established social city club? Not any of those aims and ideals which drew together the citizens of Athens and ancient Rome; nor yet the aim, commercial and protective, of the mediæval guilds, nor that of the Knights during those same ages. Men in a modern social club may cherish and pursue many kinds of individual aims. May not the one they all share be just to flock with birds of their own feather? And what kind of feather is it? Mr. Henry Dwight Sedgwick has written recently with learning and grace upon the obsolescent "Guild of Gentlemen"; and he says of them in a chapter entitled Upholders of Convention:

Over these matters of convention, over manners and behavior not regulated by law, there must be tutors and masters, officers and magistrates, and these were provided, under the old regime, by the Guild of Gentlemen. As I have said, this Guild did not constitute a class, though the group partook of the character of a class; it was rather a Club, open to all persons furnished with the qualities prescribed by the constitution of the Club; and this perhaps is the origin of the phrase, soon distorted from its proper meaning, persons of quality. Strictly speaking, the mere fact of birth would not entitle admission to this Club, but parents of social position, of wealth, of leisure, for the most part endeavored to educate their children in such manner as to make them eligible as a matter of course. The requirements did not necessarily include the four cardinal virtues, nor kindness, generosity, pity, although most of the requisite clubbable qualities have their roots in these virtues and derive their nourishment therefrom. Nevertheless, the virtues were present in generous measure, or the Guild would have perished long since, but certain other traits were necessarily present also.

You remember in Twelfth Night, after Viola said, "I am a gentleman," Olivia's comment was, "I'll be sworn thou art. Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit do give thee five-fold blazons." Requisites for admission, I repeat, were courtesy, self-restraint, a nice regard to the rules of etiquette, a command of speech, an elegance of dress, a familiarity with the habits of the leisure class, a respect for appearance, for the outside of things, a desire to make the passing moment pleasurable. All these matters were governed by convention, and lay in the jurisdiction of the Guild.

Take it all in all, we carry on the tradition, patriotic, social, and civilized, of an honorable and happy past; and, despite adverse conditions and the vicissitudes of recent years, we look forward to carrying our tradition on into a happy future.

ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE OF PENNSYLVANIA

Incorporating the "Philadelphia Association and Reading Room," approved the eighth day of May, 1850.

SECTION 2. "That Hyman Gratz, Charles F. Lex, Samuel B. Thomas, John Biddle, M.D., Joseph Swift, and their associates, be and they are hereby created a body corporate and politic, with the name, style and title of 'The Philadelphia Association and Reading Room,' with authority to elect officers and to establish By-Laws for their government, and to hold real estate, the yearly value of which shall not exceed three thousand dollars; provided that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to authorize said 'Philadelphia Association and Reading Room,' to do any other act or acts, in their corporate capacity, than are herein expressed."

[Pamphlet Laws, 1850, page 726.]

By a decree of the Court of Quarter Sessions for the City and County of Philadelphia, made the 25th of May, 1859, the name and title of "The Philadelphia Association and Reading Room" was changed to that of "THE PHILADELPHIA CLUB," with the same privileges, powers and authorities to which it was lawfully entitled under the former name.

By-Laws

OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTION

I.

The affairs of the Club shall be managed by a Board of Direction consisting of the President and eight Directors, who shall be nominated and elected by the Club at the Annual Meeting, except as hereinafter provided for. The Tellers at such election shall count no ballots except those cast for candidates previously nominated. The Board shall continue to serve until a new Board be regularly elected.

II.

The President of the Club shall be ex officio a Director and the presiding officer of the Board.

III.

If the office of the President become vacant, the Board shall call a special meeting of the Club to elect a President. If other vacancies occur in the Board, the remaining Directors shall choose members of the Club to fill said vacancies until the next election.

IV.

The Board shall appoint from the Directors a Treasurer and a Secretary, who shall perform their duties subject to its control.

V.

The Board of Direction shall have and exercise a general superintendence of the affairs of the Club; shall control and manage its property and effects, and enforce the preservation of order and obedience to the rules. It shall make all necessary purchases and contracts.

VI.

The Board of Direction, of which five shall be a quorum, shall meet at least once in every month for the transaction of business. The Secretary shall keep minutes of the proceedings, and also of all other matters which may concern the Club.

VII.

The Treasurer shall prepare two copies of his annual accounts, brought up to the first day of April in each year, exhibiting in detail the receipts and expenditures of the preceding year, the balance of money in hand, and the existing debts of the Club; one of which copies shall be laid upon the table for inspection by members during at least one week immediately before the Annual Meeting next following the said date, and the other at the same time presented to the Auditors.

OF MEETINGS OF THE CLUB

VIII.

The Annual Meeting of the Club shall be held on the second Monday in May of each year, at such hour as the Board of Direction, by notice shall appoint.

IX.

All elections for President, Directors, or members of the Elective Committee shall be by ballot, and a plurality of votes shall be sufficient to elect. The Chairman shall be chosen by the meeting and shall appoint Tellers to conduct the election. At such elections the polls shall be kept open at least two hours, unless otherwise ordered by a vote of three-fourths of the members present.

X.

At every stated meeting the Board shall report its proceedings during the previous term, and recommend such measures as it may deem advisable. The Treasurer shall make his report of the finances of the Club as presented to the Auditors.

XI.

At every Annual Meeting three Auditors shall be appointed by the President, to serve for one year, or until new Auditors be regularly chosen. The duty of the Auditors shall be to audit and settle the accounts of the Treasurer and to present their reports thereof to the next Annual Meeting. They shall have power to fill vacancies in their number, and two of them shall be a quorum. At the same meeting, the President shall appoint three members of the Club to serve as a Library Committee.

XII.

At the Annual Meeting of the Club, after organization, the order of business, so far as the nature and character of the meeting may admit, shall be as follows:—

1. Reading the minutes of the last Annual Meeting, and of every special meeting subsequent thereto.
2. Report of the Board of Direction.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Report of the Auditors thereon.
5. Reports of Committees.
6. The appointment of Auditors.
7. New business.
8. Election of the Board of Direction and Elective Committee.

Provided, That this order of business may be on motion changed by a majority of the meeting.

XIII.

A notice of every meeting of the Club, whether annual or special, shall be posted upon the bulletin board at least ten days before the time assigned for such meeting, and a copy mailed to each member.

XIV.

It shall be the duty of the Board to call a special meeting of the Club, upon the written request of ten members; and such a meeting may also be called whenever the Board may deem it expedient.

XV.

The notice of a special meeting shall specify the time, and also the purpose for which it may be called; and such meeting shall not consider, nor take action on, any matter other than that specified in the said notice.

XVI.

At any meeting of the Club for action on the conduct of a member which may involve his expulsion, one-fifth of the whole number of resident members of the Club shall be a quorum. For the transaction of any other business, thirty resident members shall be a quorum.

XVII.

No stranger shall be present at any meeting of the Club.

XVIII.

Subjects not concerning the Club shall not be proposed nor considered at any meeting.

XIX.

A motion involving the expulsion of a member shall be decided by ballot, and the decision of a majority shall be final.

XX.

Proxies shall not be permitted.

OF MEMBERS

XXI.

The number of members of the Club shall not exceed five hundred. Non-resident members and Army and Navy members shall not count in the maximum number of members.

The Board with the approval of the Elective Committee may at any time and from time to time provide that any one or more life members shall not be counted in the maximum number of members.

XXII.

No person under twenty-one years of age shall be a member of the Club.

XXIII.

Members may be resident, Army and Navy, on either the active or retired list, or non-resident, but Army and Navy and non-residents shall not have the right of voting.

On and after the first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, no person shall be elected a non-resident member.

There shall be junior resident members who are less than thirty-one years of age.

A resident member may become a life member upon application to and approval by the Board, on payment of four thousand dollars, and he shall not thereafter be liable to payment of semi-annual subscriptions.

Members who are absent (seventy-five miles or more) from the City of Philadelphia, may, at their request, and at the discretion of the Board of Direction, be placed on a non-resident list.

XXIV.

The entrance money to the Club for resident members, except junior members, shall be two hundred dollars, to be paid upon admission to the Club or in two equal payments; one upon admission and one six months thereafter.

Army and Navy members will not be required to pay any entrance money, but shall have no share in the property of the Club in the event of dissolution.

The entrance money to the Club for junior resident members shall be one hundred dollars, to be paid upon admission to the Club, and a further sum of one hundred dollars to be paid on reaching the age of thirty-one years.

XXV.

The semi-annual subscription of a resident member, except a life member, or a junior member, shall be one hundred dollars and shall be due and payable in advance upon the first days of April and October in every year.

The semi-annual subscription of a junior resident member shall be one-half the semi-annual subscription of a resident member as determined from time to time, and shall be due and payable in advance upon the first days of April and October in every year. Upon reaching the age of thirty-one years, a junior member shall thereafter pay the current semi-annual subscription.

The semi-annual subscription of a non-resident member shall be fifty dollars and shall be due and payable in advance upon the first days of April and October in every year.

The semi-annual subscription of an Army and Navy member shall be twenty-five dollars and shall be due and payable in advance upon the first days of April and October in every year.

Any member elected during the last three months of the half yearly term shall, in respect of the current term, pay but one-half of the amount of his semi-annual subscription.

XXVI.

A non-resident member, on becoming a resident of the City of Philadelphia, shall pay a further sum of one hundred dollars and all the subsequent dues of a resident member.

An Army and Navy member on leaving the service of the United States shall pay the subscription of a resident member, such change to take effect at the next semi-annual period when subscriptions are due.

An Army and Navy member going on the "retired list" will continue to pay Army and Navy dues.

XXVII.

Absence from the United States shall not exempt members from the payment of their subscriptions.

XXVIII.

An account shall be kept of all sums due to the Club by members or others having the privilege of the Club, and on the first day of each month (or oftener if the Board shall so direct) a bill shall be sent to each person so indebted, which shall be payable within thirty days.

XXIX.

No games shall be played in the Club-house between twelve o'clock on Saturday night and the opening of the house on the next Monday morning.

XXX.

No member shall give any money or gratuity to a servant of the Club.

XXXI.

No member shall receive any profit, salary, or emolument from the funds of the Club.

XXXII.

All resignations shall be made in writing to the Board of Direction, and all interest in the property of the Club, of members resigning or otherwise ceasing to be members, shall be vested in the Club.

OF THE ELECTION OF MEMBERS

XXXIII.

New members shall be elected by a committee to be composed of seven members of the Club (of whom five shall be a quorum for business), who shall be elected as Directors are now elected at the Annual Meeting in May of every year.

XXXIV.

The committee shall fill vacancies which may occur in its own body by choosing members of the Club to fill the said vacancies, and shall continue to serve until a new committee be regularly elected.

XXXV.

A candidate for membership may be proposed to the committee by any member of the Club, who shall state in writing the name and residence of the proposed candidate.

XXXVI.

If the committee, by unanimous consent, shall decide to receive the person proposed as a candidate, it shall cause his name, with the date, to be registered in a book set apart for the purpose, and to be posted on the bulletin board during two weeks, after which time the committee, by a unanimous vote, may elect him a member of the Club.

XXXVII.

If the vote be not unanimous, the candidate shall be rejected, and shall not be renominated within one year thereafter.

XXXVIII.

A member elected shall be forthwith notified of his election by the Secretary, who shall at the same time furnish him with a copy of the By-Laws, and request him to pay to the Treasurer his entrance money and semi-annual subscription in advance.

XXXIX.

The payment of these sums to the Treasurer shall entitle the person elected to membership of the Club, and shall be evidence of his assent to the By-Laws.

XL.

Any person who shall receive the notice of his election and a copy of the By-Laws of the Club, and shall not, within thirty days thereafter, make payment as aforesaid, shall forfeit all rights acquired by his election.

OF STRANGERS

XLI.

A member may introduce a stranger to the Club, and shall thereon register in a book to be kept for that purpose the name and residence of such stranger and the date of such introduction, to all which the said member shall affix his own name; and he shall also, when convenient, present the stranger to one or more of the Board.

XLII.

Such introduction shall not confer any right of re-entrance; but the Board of Direction may, in its discretion, give a written invitation to a stranger for ten days which shall not be renewed within two months, or for one month which shall not be renewed within six months.

XLIII.

At the written request of five members, one of whom shall sign himself responsible as in By-Law XLVI., a quorum of the Board, by a unanimous vote by ballot, may extend to any stranger who may have been previously invited to the Club for ten days or a month, the privilege of admission for an additional period of one month, which may at expiration be renewed in the same manner for additional periods of one month, but such extensions not to exceed six months in all. Provided, That such privilege shall not be enjoyed until after the payment to the Treasurer of ten dollars for each month that the privilege is extended. And provided further, That such privilege may be withdrawn at any time by the Board.

XLIV.

Residents of the City of Philadelphia, not being members, shall not be admitted to the Club more than once in any one year save to an entertainment given in a private room, when the number of such residents shall not exceed one-fourth of the company present: Provided, That the Board may, at any time in its discretion, suspend the operation of this By-Law.

XLV.

The Board may admit to the Club, by written invitation, any foreign diplomatic agent accredited to the Government of the United States, of which the Secretary shall make a minute.

XLVI.

A member introducing a stranger to the Club, or procuring for him an invitation from the Board, shall be liable for all his debts to the Club.

XLVII.

No stranger nor visitor shall give any gratuity to a servant of the Club.

XLVIII.

On any infraction of the above By-Laws, the Board shall notify the offender, through his introducer, that he can no longer enjoy the privileges of the Club.

PAINS AND PENALTIES

XLIX.

If the conduct of a member be disorderly, or injurious to the interests of the Club, or contrary to its By-Laws, the Board shall inform him thereof in writing; and if the nature of the offence require it, shall request him to resign.

L.

Should such information or request be disregarded, the Board shall refer the matter to the next Annual Meeting of the Club, or to a special meeting to be called for the purpose, of which due notice shall be given to the offending member.

LI.

At such meeting the circumstances of the case shall be considered, and the member may be expelled.

LII.

The Board of Direction, by a unanimous vote by ballot of all its members, may expel a member of the Club for an infraction of By-Law Number XXXI, or for intentional violation of the By-Laws relating to the ballot, or for other gross misconduct; immediate notice of which expulsion shall be given him. Such expulsion shall be final, unless reversed by a special meeting of the Club, which, at the written request of the member so expelled, made within thirty days thereafter, shall be called by the Board. A copy of the notice of the said meeting shall be sent to the offender, who shall have the right to be present and heard thereat.

LIII.

If any member neglect for a period of thirty days to pay his just debts to the Club, the Secretary shall send him a written notice of the claim. If the debt be not paid within one week after the date of such notice, the name of the member shall be posted on the notice board, with the statement of the amount due, and the nature of the debt, and after his name shall have been posted no further credit shall be allowed.

If within thirty days from such posting the debt be not paid, the delinquent shall, ipso facto, cease to be a member of the Club: Provided, That upon his written application, and the payment of all dues to the date thereof, the Board in its discretion, and upon such terms as it may think necessary, may remit the penalty of this By-Law. Of all which the Secretary shall make a minute.

LIV.

The Board of Direction, by an affirmative vote of at least five (5) of its members, may suspend a member of the Club for any infraction of the By-Laws, or other misconduct, for a period of not over one year; prior to such suspension, however, the offender shall be notified, and have the right to appear before the Board of Direction and be heard thereon.

OF AMENDMENTS

LV.

A By-Law of the Club may be amended, or a new By-Law made, at any Annual or at a Special Meeting called for the purpose, the proposer having posted upon the notice board the proposed Amendment or By-Law, for at least thirty days immediately preceding the meeting, when, if two-thirds of those present shall vote in favor of the Amendment or By-Law, it shall be adopted.

House Rules

Subscription papers shall not be exposed nor circulated in the Club House.

No person shall take from the Club House a newspaper, pamphlet, book, or other article the property of the Club, nor mutilate, deface, nor destroy the same.

Reasonable notice of any entertainment in a private dining room should be given to the Steward. The cost of the private dining room will be the actual cost of the additional service required.

No guest shall give an entertainment in the Club House.

The privileges of the Club shall not be extended to any one under the age of twenty-one years.

Refreshments shall not be served in the reading rooms, bed rooms or barber shop, except breakfast may be served in the bed rooms not later than 12 o'clock noon.

The barber shop will be open from 8.30 A.M. until 7.00 P.M. on week days.

The private bed rooms may be engaged upon application at the office.

DEED OF TRUST

THE PHILADELPHIA CLUB

TO

GIRARD TRUST COMPANY, OWEN WISTER

and MORRIS L. PARRISH

TO CREATE AN ENDOWMENT FUND

DATED 13TH DECEMBER, 1935

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS:

THE PHILADELPHIA CLUB does hereby make, constitute and appoint GIRARD TRUST COMPANY, as Corporate Trustee, OWEN WISTER, President of The Philadelphia Club, and MORRIS L. PARRISH, Trustees of THE ENDOWMENT FUND OF THE PHILADELPHIA CLUB, and does hereby also make, constitute and appoint the successor of Owen Wister as President of the Club, and each succeeding President of the Club, Co-Trustee with the Girard Trust Company, or its successors, the name of each succeeding President of the Club to be communicated to the Corporate Trustee by the Secretary of the Club accompanied by a certified copy of a resolution of the Board of Directors of The Philadelphia Club declaring the name of the President of the Club. There shall be no successors to Morris L. Parrish, and there shall be, after he ceases to be Trustee, the Corporate Trustee and the President of The Philadelphia Club, as aforesaid. The said Trustees shall have and exercise the following powers:

1. To receive and hold all gifts, bequests, devises and legacies made to them as such Trustees, or to The Philadelphia Club for the use of the Endowment Fund.

2. To sell any securities or real estate so received by them, without liability upon the part of the purchasers of real estate to see to the application of the purchase money, and to accept purchase money mortgages as part of the consideration of such sales.

3. To invest and reinvest any cash received by them in such securities and other investments as they shall select, in the exercise of a reasonable and sound discretion, without limitation to so called legal investments.

4. To deposit any securities held by them under any plan of reorganization or recapitalization of the corporations issuing them, to assent to and accept such plan, and to hold under this trust the securities issued under such plan.

5. To pay the income, interest and revenues from any securities, investments, mortgages and real estate to The Philadelphia Club, subject to the payment of any taxes levied and payable by them as Trustees under any gifts, bequests, legacies and devises made to them as Trustees, or to this Fund, and the proper charges and expenses of the Trustees hereunder, which charges and expenses they are hereby expressly authorized and directed to make and incur. The net income so received by The Philadelphia Club may and shall be applied and used only to the following:

(a) To the payment of taxes on the premises occupied by the Club;

(b) To the payment of interest upon any mortgage upon such premises;

(c) To the renewals and repairs of such premises;

(d) To the payment of any installments upon any such mortgage. Any income not so applied shall be returned to the Trustees to be held by them as part of the capital fund under this Deed of Trust.

6. In the event of a final dissolution of The Philadelphia Club, to sell, transfer and deliver any securities, investments, mortgages and real estate, and to pay the proceeds thereof as may be directed by any final order or decree of any Court.

7. The Trustees shall not be responsible for the application of any income paid over by them to The Philadelphia Club under the provisions of this Deed of Trust. The Trustees shall not be liable for any act upon their part unless the same be wilful and negligent, and The Philadelphia Club hereby undertakes to save and protect harmless the Trustees from all other liability.

There has been founded a Trust Fund to provide an ENDOWMENT for the Club.

CONTRIBUTIONS to this may be made by gifts presently payable, or by Will or Deed or Contribution. The intent is to build a foundation that will ensure the continuance of the Club against vicissitudes that may assail it.

A COPY of the Deed of Gift is enclosed and members are advised of this opportunity to safeguard the future of their Club by the channel thus offered for their consideration.

OWEN WISTER
President

8. Any order of The Philadelphia Club made to the Trustees under the provisions of this Deed of Trust shall be evidenced and accompanied by a certified copy of resolutions duly adopted by the Board of Directors of The Philadelphia Club authorizing such order.

9. A Trustee hereunder may resign from this trust or may be removed by The Philadelphia Club by the action of its Board of Directors, and in either event a new Trustee appointed by The Philadelphia Club, provided that all charges, expenses, fees and advances aforesaid due to or payable by the Trustees shall first be paid.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, The Philadelphia Club, in accordance with a resolution duly adopted by its Board of Directors, has this thirteenth day of December, Nineteen hundred and thirty five (1935), executed this Deed of Trust and delivered the same.
